The

funds for the institution came in very slowly, and the hat had to be sent round the various colonies and dependencies. We may say at once that we think the object is, on the whole, a deserving one, and should receive some support from the Colony. But the grounds on which those given by the Attorney General and the Colonial Secretary. We agree with Mr Ryrie that a merchant or manufacturer the changes or developments that have taken place in any colony, dependency or foreign | he is in, and in smoothing the way for the country. As far as his own special line is opening up of new regions to commerce. The Navegazione Generale Italiana Co.'s if duties which he could not perform if he concerned, he knows, or ought to know, he is alive to his business, far sooner than were to be turned into a commercial agent, the officials of such an 'empium gatherum business man, or manufacturer, is in n certain sense a specialist, and the agents he employs are specialists, it would be reversing the order of nature to expect them to learn their business in museums, and institutions. Whatever progress our merchanta and manufacturers have to make in the way of ascertaining the requirements of the countries they deal with must be accomplished by strengthening the direct relations between seller and buyer or agent and buyer, and not by reliance on official samples or official reports.

Such an institution as is being founded in London has still, however, an important 11.30 A.M., after which hour they may | role to perform. Although a merchant may not find there the latest details about his own business he will find much valuable instruction about the general industrial progress of the world, and as all businesses are more or less interdependent the Noon.-French Mail leaves for Ports of information cannot fail to be of use to him. Perhaps the greatest benefit of such an institution, if properly conducted, would be the educating effect it would have on the rising generation and on the general publica not unimportant factor in our struggle for industrial supremacy. There can be no doubt also that there is a little in the statements of those who see in the Institute a stepping stone to Imperial Federation The sort of federation which these people desire may never be realised, but it is nevertheless true that everything which conduces to extend our knowledge of our fellow-subjects and their works and wants tends to bind us and them more closely to-

The argument with regard to commercial utility applies, we admit, with greater force to the laudable efforts that are being made in almost every town throughout Great Britain to establish industrial museums or a less pretentions scale than that of the Imperial Institute. These local institutions will certainly do much more good, as they bring the knowledge within the reach of a much wider class, and for that reason we thoroughly appreciate Mr Bell-Irving's remarks about the greater utility of following in the wake of Shanghai and establishing some such institution in Hengkong, where the more intelligent of our native population might familiarise themselves with the various products of Western lands. However, the Imperial Institute has already taken definite shape, and the idea of an industrial museum or some similar institution in Hongkong has not yet been definitely formulated. We think therefore that, as the Imperial scheme is bound in some way to have a fruitful result, although it may not accomplish the dreams of its projectors, the Colony ought to join with the other Colonies and contribute its relations between nations were more of a la farce. military than a commercial type, and the duties of the ambassadors and consuls were based accordingly. The nineteenth century, however, has seen the rise of a great industrial movement, which, if it has not suppressed militarism. has asserted an equal and in some cases a superior claim to attention. The functions of our representatives abroad ought to have changed in correspondence. Englishmen, however, have a large substratum of conservatism in their nature, think equally erroneous opinions that are | and they do not seem to have realised the generally held about this institution. > A very good idea of the regard for public rights entertained by the Government, and more especially by the Surveyor General, may be gathered from the discussion on the separate system of drainage in the Finance Committee on Saturday. The Committee were asked to vote $50,000, the first instalment of $363,000, required for the construction of a new system or systems of drainage. For several years sums of $50,000 have been voted annually for the maintenance or construction of public drains, and now it is found that the whole system has to be revolutionised and more than a third of a million of dollars have to be spent in their reconstruction. The suitability of the new system proposed has been called in question by competent authorities in the Colony; and, even admitting the suitability, the great expense involved is such as to make the Colony hesitate long before committing itself to such radical changes. Under these circumstances, one would have thought that an claborate report would have been submitted to the Finance Committee before the members were asked to vote the first instalment. Nothing of the sort, however, occurred. The Surveyor General is evidently of opinion--and the Governor seems to support him in all he does—that the Colony has no right to know anything about the details, that all their representatives have to do is to vote the money and look pleasant.

It was said that an elaborate report had been inade out and addressed to the Governor, who Mr Price evidently thought was the only one that had any claim to know what he had resolved upon-what he had actually taken steps long ago, independent of any sanction whatever, to carry out. However, the unofficial members refused to be so complaisant as Mr Price desired, and had the hardihood to ask for information. They are then graciously told that if they are good boys and approve the vote, a report will be given them before the meeting of Council. One of the members, Mr Layton, is as bold as to suggest that this is scarcely a respectful way of dealing with the members of Council, and says straight out, 'I think we ought to have had a report on such an important matter on the table now and not be obliged to wait.' To this, the suave Surveyor General can find no reply, and the conciliatory Colonial Secretary has to come in with a promise that the report will be distributed if possible before next meeting. The upshot was that the unofficial members let the vote pass with a growl and we hope with a firm determination to thrash the matter out in the Legislative Council. We can find no other word than scandalous for the action of the Government in connection with this pro-Out of the discussion of this question posed suparate system of drainage. MOORE'S GOGO SHAMPOO WASH.

THIS WASH HAS PROVED TESELY TO BE THE BEST PREPARATION EVER PRE-SENTED TO THE PUBLIC.

THE Bases of this compound is made of ■ Gogo Root. The natives of the Philippine Islands never use anything else for washing their hair; you never see them bald, and it is quite common to see the females with hair from 5 to 6 feet long. By using this SHAMPOO WASH as directed, you will never be bald. The Proprietor offers the Wash to the public, being entirely confident that by its restorative properties it will surely arrest decaying hair, completely eradicate scurf, dandruff, and cure all diseases of the scalp; it does not contain any poisonous drugs, but, by its cooling properties allays the itching and fever of the scalp. Mr. Mooke has succeeded in being able to put this Wash up in bottles without allowing it to ferment, and he will guarantee it to keep any length of time in any climate.
